(Re)Constructing Memory: School Textbooks and the Imagination of the Nation

2014-08-08 James H. Williams This book examines the shifting portrayal of the nation in school textbooks in 14 countries during periods of rapid political, social, and economic change. Drawing on a range of analytic strategies, the authors examine history and civics textbooks, and the teaching of such texts, along with other prominent curricular materials—children’s readers, a required text penned by the head of state, a holocaust curriculum, etc.. The authors analyze the uses of history and pedagogy in building, reinforcing and/or redefining the nation and state especially in the light of challenges to its legitimacy. The primary focus is on countries in developing or transitional contexts. Issues include the teaching of democratic civics in a multiethnic state with little history of democratic governance; shifts in teaching about the Khmer Rouge in post-conflict Cambodia; children’s readers used to define national space in former republics of the Soviet Union; the development of Holocaust education in a context where citizens were both victims and perpetrators of violence; the creation of a national past in Turkmenistan; and so forth. The case studies are supplemented by commentary, an introduction and conclusion.

Divine Rulers in a Secular State

2018-03-09 Timo Kallinen In present-day Africa chiefs interact fluently with modern states, international organizations, and business corporations, and traditional chieftaincy is perceived essentially as a secular institution. Consequently, social scientists have started paying serious attention to the role of traditional authorities in contemporary political landscapes. Yet it was only a few decades ago that classic ethnographers were characterizing chiefs as priests, magicians, diviners, rainmakers, and the like. What happened to the divinity of African chiefs and kings? Drawing on his research on the Asante people of Ghana, West Africa, Timo Kallinen explores how the colonial and postcolonial states have attempted to secularize the sacred institutions of chiefship and kingship, a process which is by no means complete. Furthermore, it has frequently proved a problematic undertaking with regards to a number of burning issues in contemporary Ghanaian society, such as Pentecostal-Charismatic Christianity, nationalism, international development aid, civil society participation, coup d'états, and witchcraft.

Star Wars that Changed History

It was the year 2023, and the world was on the brink of war. The United States and China, the two superpowers, were locked in a fierce rivalry, competing for resources, influence, and dominance. They had developed advanced weapons, such as lasers, drones, and satellites, that could strike anywhere, anytime. They had also secretly built space stations, that could launch nuclear missiles, that could destroy the planet. They were ready to use them, if necessary. But they were not alone. There was a third force, a hidden force, that had been watching them, waiting for them, preparing for them. They were the aliens, and they had come to stop them. They had come to save the world, or to end it. They had come to start the star wars that changed history.
