Nelson Mandela was one of the most influential and inspiring leaders of the 20th century. He was born on July 18, 1918, in Mvezo, a small village in South Africa. He belonged to the Thembu royal family, and was given the name Rolihlahla, which means “troublemaker” in Xhosa. He grew up in a time of racial oppression and discrimination, and witnessed the injustices and violence inflicted by the white minority government on the black majority. He decided to dedicate his life to the struggle for freedom and equality, and joined the African National Congress (ANC), a political party that fought against apartheid, the system of racial segregation and domination in South Africa. He became a lawyer, an activist, and a leader, and was arrested and imprisoned several times for his resistance and defiance. He spent 27 years in prison, most of them on Robben Island, a notorious prison island where he endured harsh conditions and isolation. He never gave up his hope and vision, and continued to inspire and mobilize his people and the world. He was released from prison in 1990, and became the first democratically elected president of South Africa in 1994.
