CLASSICAL MECHANICS

2008-02-14 G. ARULDHAS This book offers an in-depth presentation of the mechanics of particles and systems. The material is thoroughly class-tested and hence eminently suitable as a textbook for a one-semester course in Classical Mechanics for postgraduate students of physics and mathematics. Besides, the book can serve as a useful reference for engineering students at the postgraduate level. The book provides not only a complete treatment of classical theoretical physics but also an enormous number of worked examples and problems to show students clearly how to apply abstract principles and mathematical techniques to realistic problems. While abstraction of theory is minimized, detailed mathematical analysis is provided wherever necessary. Besides an all-embracing coverage of different aspects of classical mechanics, the rapidly growing areas of nonlinear dynamics and chaos are also included. The chapter on Central Force Motion includes topics like satellite parameters, orbital transfers and scattering problem. An extensive treatment on the essentials of small oscillations which is crucial for the study of molecular vibrations is included. Rigid body motion and special theory of relativity are also covered in two separate chapters.

Daylight Simulation with Photon Maps

2005 Roland Schregle Physically based image synthesis remains one of the most demanding tasks in the computer graphics field. Unlike mainstream applications which merely demand visually convincing images and short rendering times, physically based rendering emphasises accuracy at the cost of increased computational overhead. Among its more specialised applications is lighting simulation, particularly in conjunction with daylight. Many materials used in daylight simulation are specifically designed to redirect light, and as such give rise to complex effects such as caustics. Density estimation algorithms such as the photon map are well suited to efficiently render these effects. This thesis investigates the photon maps applicability to daylight simulation by assessing its ability to produce physically correct results. To this end, a method to compensate for inherent bias in the reconstructed illumination is proposed. Furthermore, the thesis documents a methodology for validating the photon map based on analytical case studies and measurements from simple experimental setups.
