2012-12-06 Dickson D. Despommier Worldwide, the numbers of people suffering and dying from parasitic diseases are overwhelming, with more than 100 million cases and 1 million deaths each year from malaria alone. Despite the magnitude of the problem and the importance of the parasites that cause opportunistic infections among persons with HIV/AIDS, medical schools in the United States, Canada, and other developed countries consistently reduce the amount of time spent on parasitic diseases in the curriculum. As a result most medical students receive limited information about these diseases, and are inadequately prepared to diagnose or treat them as physicians. time available for parasitology in the medical school curriculum; at most, students can be acquainted with the salient features of the medically important parasites. Likewise, the traditional isolation of parasitology from the rest of the curriculum (consistent with its exclusion from most microbiology texts) is another unresolved problem. In my opinion, this is why most physicians are unable to think about the differential diagnosis of parasitic diseases in the same way that they routinely balance the probabilities of malignancy, cardiovascular, renal, and pulmonary disease vs other infectious diseases. To resolve these problems, relevant paradigms from parasitology must be used in the teaching of cell biology, molecular biology, genetics, and immunology.

Knowles How do you tailor education to the learning needs of adults? Do they learn differently from children? How does their life experience inform their learning processes? These were the questions at the heart of Malcolm Knowles' pioneering theory of andragogy which transformed education theory in the 1970s. The resulting principles of a self-directed, experiential, problem-centred approach to learning have been hugely influential and are still the basis of the learning practices we use today. Understanding these principles is the cornerstone of increasing motivation and enabling adult learners to achieve. The 9th edition of The Adult Learner has been revised to include: Updates to the book to reflect the very latest advancements in the field. The addition of two new chapters on diversity and inclusion in adult learning, and andragogy and the online adult learner. An updated supporting website. It was a gloomy and turbulent night. The downpour was falling heavily, and the breeze was howling. In the middle of the city, there was a museum, where a priceless diamond was on exhibit. The diamond was known as the African Star, and it was the biggest and most gorgeous diamond in the earth. It was secured by a high-tech security system, and a group of weaponized guards. No one could rob it, or so they thought. But someone did. An individual managed to circumvent the security, to evade the watchmen, to smash the window, and to take the diamond. And no one observed them, no one listened to them, no one identified who they were. They exited no trace, no clue, no evidence. They disappeared into the nightfall, with the African Star. And the mystery of the lost diamond started.
