He was tired of his life. He was bored, depressed, and discontented. He had a job he hated, a manager he despised, and a girlfriend he didn't adore. He had no zeal, no purpose, no value. He sensed like he was wasting his moment, his capability, his life. He desired to modify, he wanted to escape, he desired to live. He resolved to quit his work, to split up with his significant other, to get rid of his belongings, and to buy a one-way pass to the other side of the world. He didn't understand where he was going, he didn't know what he was performing, he didn't understand what he was searching for. He only understood that he had to depart, that he had to investigate, that he had to discover. He started on a trip of a thousand distances, a journey of adventure, of challenge, of learning, of growth, of change.

The book "Analyzing Casual Conversation" by Suzanne Eggins and Diana Slade, originally published in 1997, establishes a systematic model for the study and description of casual conversation in English. The scholars argue that notwithstanding its occasionally aimless appearance and seemingly unstructured substance, casual conversation is an extremely structured task and has a crucial role in the social formation of reality. The book proceeds through genuine instances of casual conversations involving participants differing in age, gender, ethnicity, and socio-economic class¹². Deriving on understandings from sociology, linguistics, and critical semiotics, the publication provides readers with the analytical skills to portray the layers of structure and critical interpretive models to clarify the 'social work' that goes on through chat.
