Scientific Computing with MATLAB and Octave 2010-05-30 Alfio Quarteroni Preface to the First Edition This textbook is an introduction to Scientific Computing. We will illustrate several numerical methods for the computer solution of certain classes of mathematical problems that cannot be faced by paper and pencil. We will show how to compute the zeros or the integrals of continuous functions, solve linear systems, approximate functions by polynomials and construct accurate approximations for the solution of differential equations. With this aim, in Chapter 1 we will illustrate the rules of the game that computers adopt when storing and operating with real and complex numbers, vectors and matrices. In order to make our presentation concrete and appealing we will adopt the programming environment MATLAB as a faithful companion. We will gradually discover its principal commands, statements and constructs. We will show how to execute all the algorithms that we introduce throughout the book. This will enable us to furnish an immediate quantitative assessment of their theoretical properties such as stability, accuracy and complexity. We will solve several problems that will be raised through exercises and examples, often stemming from scientific applications.

Machine Translation and the Information Soup 2003-06-29 David Farwell Machine Translation and the Information Soup! Over the past fifty years, machine translation has grown from a tantalizing dream to a respectable and stable scientific-linguistic enterprise, with users, commercial systems, university research, and government participation. But until very recently, MT has been performed as a relatively distinct operation, so-what isolated from other text processing. Today, this situation is changing rapidly. The explosive growth of the Web has brought multilingual text into the reach of nearly everyone with a computer. We live in a soup of information, an increasingly multilingual bouillabaisse. And to partake of this soup, we can use MT systems together with more and more tools and language processing technologies|information retrieval engines, -tomated text summarizers, and multimodal and multilingual displays. Though some of them may still be rather experimental, and though they may not quite fit together well yet, it is clear that the future will offer text manipulation systems that contain all these functions, seamlessly interconnected in various ways.
